Telecom Italia Foundation has once again joined forces with Italy's Ministry for Education, University and Research (MIUR) and Italian Dyslexic Association AID to launch the latest edition of its 'Dislessia Amica' digital project for the development of technological tools in response to specific needs of dyslexia. Schools and teachers have until 30 September to sign up to the latest edition of the e-learning project, with the 50-hour course lasting from October to December. A total of 2,587 'dyslexia friendly' educational institutions with 74,639 teachers were certified in the first phase of the project ending in May.
